

After you see the Doctor—
see us

We first laugh at the follies of the small boy, but when they become serious it is time to think of a drug store.

The prudent thing to do is; prepare in advance for the little folks' indiscretions, sure to be committed by HAVING ON HAND a full supply of household remedies.

Come in; we will help you select the remedies that should always be in every home.

M. H. JAMES
WE TAKE CARE.

WEATHER BULLETIN

Washington, D. C., June 17.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent June 19 to 23, warm wave 18 to 22, cool wave 21 to 25. Temperatures are expected to average about normal during that week. Storms will be moderate till about June 21, when they will be near meridian 90, latitude 40. About and following that date the storm forces will increase and become dangerous. General and heavy rains are expected with these great storms in all southern and eastern sections, including in some sections, tornadoes and hail.

These great storms may be called the advance guard of the greatest storms of the year. From near June 20 to the close of July great and destructive storms will be frequent near and south of latitude 40, east of the Rockies. Bad crop weather is expected where these storms strike and good crop weather in all sections that they miss. Great storms during the crop season usually bring good crops as an average because of an abundance of rain and the great vigor of plant life because of the electro-magnetic elements of the storm forces.

Warm wave of next disturbance will reach vicinity of Vancouver near June 26, with rising temperature all along the Pacific slope. This warm wave will turn east, cross the crest of the Rockies by close of 27, planes sections 28, meridian 90, Great Lakes and Ohio valleys 29, eastern sections 30, reaching Newfoundland 31. Storm wave will follow about one day behind and cool wave two days behind the warm wave.

This will be a continuation of the general great storms described above, but this storm will be most severe on the Pacific slope and will begin to lose force as it nears the Atlantic coast. It will affect the whole continent, some places more in heat, others in very cool, other in hail or heavy rains or tornadoes and other sections in exceedingly bright and deep blue skies. Each of these weather features will go to great extremes during this great storm period covering June 20 to July 1.

A great change in weather conditions will come in with August. The forces that control our crop weather have been continuously very similar since the first of February, causing in a general way, cool, wet weather and later than usual in its effects on the crops. These bulletins gave a generally correct forecast of these conditions.

But a radical change will come with August. The unusually cool weather features will disappear, storms will decrease in force and will follow more eastern and northern routes. This general condition will continue till the end of December. Details will be given later.

We will have experienced two years of this peculiar weather, but a great change is coming for 1917; a change that will require different methods in planting and sowing for the production of crops. We are preparing to thoroughly discuss these important weather events.
